

The Deathstone (Stone Trilogy Book 3)

The Deathstone is, as the Boston Globe describes, the expertly written, chilling finale to the Stone series, Ken Eulos trilogy of horror that has sold over 3 million copies. The occult nightmares of Chandal Knight are long past and she has spent seven good, loving years with her husband, Ron Talon, with whom she had a wonderful little girl, Kristy. When The Deathstone opens, Ron, under enormous stress at his Hollywood talent agency after a writers strike, is drinking heavily, and little Kristy isnt acting like herself, either. Chandal is thus eager for the family to get away on vacation and they set out to drive across the great American West. An accident in Utah strands them in a remote mountain village. The townspeople there are friendly but some of their customs seem a little strange. While Ron is secretly experiencing violent, psycho-sexual visions and hallucinations, little Kristy is obsessed with creatures no one else can see. When the family participates in the villages Carnival of Summer, Chandal is traumatized by the realization that an insidious specter of evil is determined to wreak revenge by taking her husband and child. Mr. Eulo weaves a strange and terrifying tale; writes Whitney Streiber, and the ending is deeply chilling. An altogether unforgettable performance!
