

Roads of Destiny, Vol. 7 (Classic Reprint)

What is to be. True heart and strong, with love to light Will they not bear me in the fight To order, shun or wield or mould My Destiny? Unpublished Poem of David Henry David Ignou 1HE Bong was over. The words were David's; the air one of the countryside. The company about the inn table applauded heartily for the young poet paid for the wine. Only the notary M. Papineau shook his head a little at the lines, for he was a man of books, and he had not drunk with the rest. David went out into the village street, where the night air drove the wine vapour from his head. And then he remembered that he and Yvonne had quarrelled that day, and that he had resolved to leave his home that night to seek fame and honour in the great world outside. When my poems are on every man's tongue, he told himself, in a fine exhilaration, she will, perhaps, think of the hard words she spoke this day. Except the roysterers in the tavern, the village folk were abed. David crept softly into his room in the shed of his father's cottage and made a bundle of his small store of clothing. With this upon a staff, he set his face outward upon the road that ran from Vemoy. (Typographical errors above are due to OCR software and do not occur in the book.)
